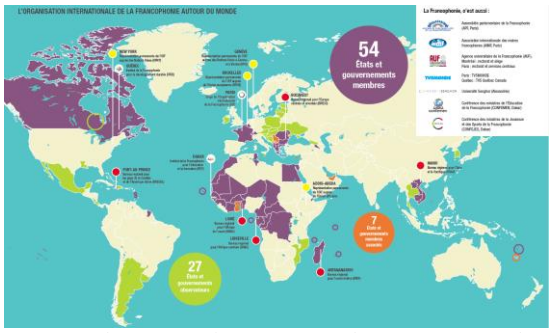
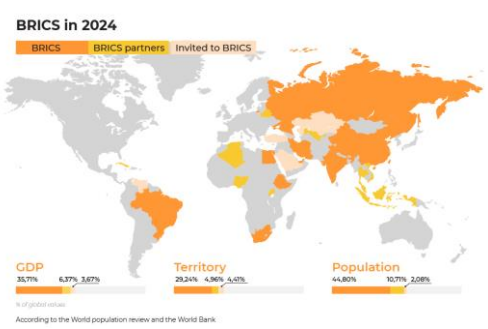
France's survival requires England's destruction

The inevitable consequence of the mistake is the disaster; the expected result of the oversight is the defeat; the natural outcome of use is the uselessness; and the reasonable conclusion of a long endured ascent is a precipitated descent. It is therefore only normal for a flourishing state or empire to encounter putrefaction and decomposition at the end. Even worse, when things are not clear, deceptive stories envelop the truth, and people are not conscious of the real state of things…





Francophonie and BRICS+: the two maps show how France can reshape the world, by dropping the worthless Anglo-Saxon West and leading the decolonization and de-Westernization pledge of all Asiatics, Africans, Latin Americans, and many Europeans.

Contents

I. France, England, and the rest of the world
II. The European Union has been hijacked by England
III. The only enemy of France is England
IV. The foundations of a new worldwide strategy for France
1- No East and no West: the world is one!
2- No North and no South: the world is one!
3- Being not part of the French culture and civilization, soft power serves only to destroy France
4- No migrants and no refugees!
5- No extremist and no moderate Islam!
6- Sign a Peace Treaty with Germany
7- Identify France's major allies: Germany, Russia, Iran, India and China
8- Set the Western Orientalism upright!
9- Eliminate Hellenism as a divisive trickery
10- Eradicate the fallacy of Panarabism
11- Create a great number of major regional allies by rectifying the mistakes of French colonialism
12- A secular international community is not a faithless world

I. France, England, and the rest of the world

After 200 years of unprecedented rise and glory, Spain and Portugal were truly exsanguine. It was the time of the Roi Soleil, when France, Holland, and England started their meteoric ascent. It is essential for all to note that the Spanish and the Portuguese colonials did not destroy any great historical empire of the so-called 'Ancient World'; they clashed with them, but there was not a decisive outcome. On the contrary, the three Western European maritime empires, which were substituted to the Iberian sea powers, first inherited the newly acquired lands of the arbitrarily baptized 'New World' and second attempted to destroy, dismantle, and occupy the territories of all major empires of the Ancient World, namely the Ottoman Empire, Safavid Iran, Mughal India, Romanov Russia, and Qing China.

What was impossible to happen at the military level was attempted at the cultural, academic, intellectual, theoretical-ideological, and governmental-political level;
if the Mughal were replaced by the English in South Asia;
if Qajar Iran was superseded by the Western puppets that Orientalists baptized as 'Pahlavi'; if the Ottoman Empire took 125 years (1798-1923) to be progressively decomposed;
- Russia, after 300 years of Romanov cleavage between pro-Western and pro-Eastern, was Sovietized; and
- China, after more than 250 years of intransigent Qing rule, was ravaged by the Xinhai Revolution in 1911, falling successively to the hands of the Revive China Society, the Kuomintang, and then to the Communists.
Accepting the Western notion of 'nation', any related theory and political ideology or alternatively Marx, Lenin, and Stalin are indeed forms of Westernization.

The sole markedly different approach proved to be that initiated by Kemal Ataturk, who represents a genuinely local reassessment of the Western educational, academic, scientific, technological, and governmental progress and a critical, selective stance toward issues that have been insidiously promoted and arbitrarily accepted in the West over the past century, causing therefore the troubles and the ordeal that we attest everywhere today. Contrarily to Stalin, the founder of the Turkish Republic did not need to sojourn in Vienna in order write pertinent and vital proposals for his own party.

Meanwhile, and quite early, the USA was instituted in part of the English colonial territories in North America at a time the French and the Spaniards still occupied the largest part of today's area of the United States. But the new country came also with a new system, which was fervently supported by many distinguished French fighters, activists, and intellectuals; this consisted in a real challenge (not only to then still existing empires of the Ancient World but) to then risen maritime empires of France, Holland, and England.

To be consistent with History, one has to take into consideration the fact that this internal rivalry, conflict, antagonism, and hostility did characterize the Western World over the past 250 years; I do not mean that the United States declared war on Europe; the struggle was far more subtle and imperceptible because the promoters of two diametrically opposed concepts of worldview, governance, social organization, and spirituality clashed against one another by means of covert war, infiltration, simulation, and deception, now prevailing here, now rising to power there, while always diffusing this divide throughout the earlier colonized lands. As a matter of fact, the diverse ideological masks that they used to wear helped them conceal their identity and quite often confused their opponents. In other words, the Western European colonialism ended up with a rift spread (or reproduced) across the Earth.

But the invisible forces, which set up the US in the second half of the 18th c. and underwent many transformations for the needs of the clash with their (Western) enemies, still exist; the same is also valid for their opponents. As they incessantly utilize diverse states, governments, international bodies, political parties and leaders, corporations, theories, ideologies, technologies and -in one word- all possible means in their conflict against one another, it is to be expected that they use stronger tools and arms in their ongoing antagonism. If a leading country, which in the past was the locomotive of the historical evolution, ceases to play the role that it used to, this state will be gradually left aside.

II. The European Union has been hijacked by England

This is to some extent what happened to France; having been the driving force of historical developments for centuries, the country appears to be by now exsanguine and unnecessary. The same occurs also to England, to Germany, to Italy, to Holland and to Spain, which were the main levers of world power for centuries. For France to get disentangled from the present situation, two prerequisites are demanded:

a- first, all French has to understand that when France reached the peak of its power under Louis XVI, there was no European Union; when Napoleon disembarked in Abuqir near Alexandria, he did not arrive there as the representative of a group of nations; and when his soldiers set fire in Moscow (14 to 18 September 1812), there were no Portuguese, Danish, Italian, Hungarian, Finnish, German and Polish allies among them.

In other words, France must beforehand be liberated from the catastrophic myth of European Union. Do not get me wrong! It is clear that, as projects, the European Coal and Steel Community (ECSC) and later the European Community were not bad at all; but every project -major or minor- that happens to be launched under the most auspicious circumstances can turn out to be a nightmare if it is calamitously hijacked by an insidious, stealthy and deceptive enemy. In fact, any paradisiacal nectar can be transmuted to hellish venom.

b- second, no country survived, let alone excelled, without having first identified accurately its real enemy. Without proper and pertinent identification of their hidden but real foe, countries disappeared from this world, leaving only the memory of their phantasmagorical failure.

Consequently, all the French will have to undergo a real process of deep self-criticism and reassessment of the History of France in order to realize that

1- some of their national and colonial achievements were not truly real (i.e. due to the French genius and necessary to the French interests) but rather due to the fact that they represented also the wish, and thus garnered the support, of a vicious enemy metamorphosed to friend for this or that occasion.

Example: the French mandate for Syria and Lebanon, under the terms, the conditions and the circumstances it occurred, was more useful to the English than to the true, yet unidentified, French interests in the region (more will be discussed below).

and

2- the real enemy of France can never be identified with Germany, Austria-Hungary, Russia, Italy, Spain, Mughal India, the Ottoman Empire or the United States; these countries were only occasional or circumstantial rivals or opponents. Any time France was in war with one of the aforementioned empires, kingdoms or states, it was either the result of a subtle machination undertaken by France's true enemy or a development that happened momentarily to be in accordance with the interests of that inimical state, which was so easily identified by Captain Nemo, an epitomized form of the French Genius, envisioned by Jules Verne.

III. The only enemy of France is England

After all, every single war occurred between France and any of the states referred to in the previous paragraph did not last 100 years, but much less. Quite contrarily, the Hundred Years' War (1337-1453) brought the French and the English face to face with one another for more than a century. Both kingdoms followed different trajectories for some time, but their colonial vocation pitched them against each other in what is collectively called the Second Hundred Years' War (1689–1815).

Over the past 300 years, from the Carnatic Wars down to our days, England has pursued the same Anti-French strategy and carried out all the related tactics. The fundamental axes of London's worldwide master plan persistently involve the following measures:

a- in Europe, the English tried incessantly through machinations to impose a balance that would never allow for the creation of a major continental power; it goes without saying that their perfidious practices were mainly implemented against France (1789-1870), Germany (1870-1945), and Russia (after 1945). Example: when Napoleon III was able to achieve outstanding successes for France's colonial empire, the English managed to mobilize the Prussians, triggering the Franco-Prussian War; later, similar tactics were carried out against Imperial (and then Nazi) Germany, whereas the myth about the Iron Curtain and the ensued so-called Cold War plunged the international community into an unnecessary deception – all due to English lies, hypocrisy and inhumanity.

b- in areas of colonial competition, the English first followed the French and then attempted to erode their authority at the local level in order to usurp power and supplant their enemy; this practice eventually generated wars, as it occurred in India, various other forms of conflict (Georges Clemenceau and Lloyd George clashed at the Paris Peace Conference in 1919) or led to compromise (like the Crisis of Fashoda). The fact that the two countries had regular relations and, after a certain moment, a friendly connection ("Entente Cordiale") gave the opportunity to the English to slowly infiltrate into the French establishment, imperceptibly confuse the major decision makers, and effectively disorient them from the targets that properly suited France's genuine interests – to the benefit of England.

This situation damaged France's interests greatly; it tarnished the country's image worldwide, and it dragged France into a colonial quagmire in which Paris has been endlessly accused of strategies, policies, practices and tactics that gravely harmed the interests of various nations across the Earth. Even worse, pulled by an intense and uncontrolled antagonism with London, Paris delivered a distorted interpretation of the explorations, discoveries, researches, and studies undertaken as result of, and in parallel with, the colonial expansion; this distortion of the past and the heritage of so many nations suited only the interests of the Anglo-Saxon racism, supremacism and imperialism. Quite unfortunately, this situation turned France into a copy of English colonialism and destroyed Paris' relations with all the colonized nations irrespective of the colonial metropolis, as well as with other countries.

In spite of controlling a sizeable part of Africa, Indochina, and a great number of islands in all the oceans, and being influential in many parts of Europe, France failed (before and after WW I) to prevent the establishment of a calamitous international order which was initially conceived by the English, adjusted to the interests of the City of London, and structured in a way to strangle all the other nations, France included, in time. We attest the calamity of this international order nowadays, and it cannot and will not change unless
- the US eliminates all the tentacles of English infiltration not only as regards the so-called 'deep state', i.e. the administration, but also with respect to their educational, academic and intellectual system, thus turning the land to a genuinely anti-colonial power and re-adjusting it as per the Founding Fathers' principles, values and targets; and/or
- France removes from all aspects of social and governmental life the imperceptibly adopted Anglo-Saxon racism, supremacism and imperialism and the disastrously impregnated English colonial viewpoint over the world affairs, thus launching first the most fervent intellectual, socio-governmental movement of de-Westernization and decolonization in the world.

It may appear bizarre to suggest to a so-called 'Western' country to lead the much needed worldwide decolonization and de-Westernization process, but as it is, this consists in the only means for the entire world to resolutely avoid once forever the rise of a well-orchestrated but totally counter-productive and highly destructive anti-Occidentalism (or anti-Western sentiment), which still plays into the English colonial game, because without eliminating the roots of the Western academic, intellectual, educational, cultural, socioeconomic and political colonialism, it brings forth sterile clashes, calamitous conflicts, unnecessary wars and an interminable flow of income for Wall Street / City of London controlled corporations in an evidently low-risk environment where idiots fight against imbeciles and fools kill cretins, thus ruining their countries.

IV. The foundations of a new worldwide strategy for France

Consequently, France has to envision how to effectively and beneficially demolish the myths, the lies, the distortions, the concealment of truths, and the oversights that were diffused in order to bring the global establishment to its present condition; it is to be reminded that Paris was forced to contribute to this multifaceted deception and fallacy, thus acting against the French local, regional, and international interests.

1- No East and no West: the world is one!

All the divisions of the world must be considered as either wrong perceptions or deliberate fallacies and as such eliminated. The division East-West is a catastrophic nonsense; what differentiated Western Europe from the rest of the world does not constitute a division between two otherwise nonexistent entities, namely 'East' and 'West'. The false rereading of the Western European past that took place in very few European lands (during the 14th–16th c.) was an unnecessary process, which proved to be totally incompatible with the universal aspirations of many leading French philosophers of the 18th c., notably Voltaire; but the universal worldview had been earlier attested in many civilizations and cultures.

Consequently, instead of foolishly dividing the world into parts that only appear to be opposite to one another, French academics and intellectuals have to identify the analogies, the similarities, the identical values and their diverse expressions between the French and other traditions, cultures and civilizations across the Earth.

2- No North and no South: the world is one!
Similarly, the division North-South, which is a calamitous remnant of the so-called Cold War era and the erroneous emergence of the arbitrarily named 'Third World', has to be declared as meaningless and dangerous. The socioeconomic technological and academic rise of countries like India, Brazil, Thailand, Malaysia, South Africa and others fully demonstrates that more fundamental traits unite than divide the geographically disparate countries of the various continents. Totally derogatory as term, the appellation 'Third World' was indeed the embodiment of the English colonial game against the entire mankind.

As a matter of fact, widely used today, the term 'Global South' constitutes a so-wide range of diverse countries that France can certainly be included; actually, it is always preferable to participate in group to which you perhaps don't belong than to oppose it, causing detrimental collateral damages and playing the game of a perfidious and malignant enemy.

3- Being not part of the French culture and civilization, soft power serves only to destroy France
Treacherously promoted as 'element of Modern European values' and as constituent of the French policy-making, the so-called soft power is a totally ahistorical and genuinely Anti-French nonsense; there is no soft power praised in the Chanson de Roland, there was no concern for this ludicrous notion at the time of Jeanne d'Arc, no one evoked it as a principle during the French Revolution, and no French soldier in Verdun deemed of it as a potential alternative in 1916.

As a matter of fact, soft power is exclusively useful and malevolently beneficial to the ruling forces of this world, because as tactics, it definitely condemns their opponents into eternal inertia and disastrous inactivity, thus ensuring the prolongation of the present contaminated and putrefied world order and the gradual decomposition and elimination of their enemies. For France, soft power is the ultimate death warrant.

4- No migrants and no refugees!
Due to the adverse demographic conditions that prevail in France, it is certain that the country needs extra working force; all the same, this fact has nothing to do with the criminally instituted secretive but ostensible operation "Send alien refugees to destroy Europe". The needs of French economy are totally different and absolutely unrelated to the purposefully orchestrated campaign by which dozens of millions of unsuspicious Asiatics and Africans are transported to Europe in order to generate all sorts of troubles. It is crystal clear that establishing a link between a) Paris' need for many hundreds of thousands or millions of extra workers and b) the unnecessary and unsolicited arrival of fake and illegal refugees in Europe is sheer paranoia.

More specifically, the aforementioned equation is a false dilemma and a viciously invented fallacy that targets the existence of France and of several other Western states; however, since I focus on French affairs in the present article, I will totally disregard the issue of other European states. Actually, only a genuine idiot or a perverse gangster or a heinous English diplomat would accept that, because there is an ostensible need for numerous extra workers, France is 'obliged' to welcome, let alone accommodate, millions of disqualifying, unspecialized, and even hostile elements. In any case, the newcomers arrive only because they know that they will get money in a most immoral, illegal and undeserving manner, due to the calamitous infiltration of perfidious, anti-French, and anti-European English agents.

Even worse is the case of pseudo-Islamic militants, who have long been the subject of evil Saudi-Qatari-funded propaganda, Muslim Brotherhood terrorist ideological intoxication, totally distorted education, incommensurate complex of socioeconomic inferiority, and paranoid political indoctrination in order to stupidly believe that by means of lies, deceitful tricks, and covert hatred, they will 'conquer' and eventually Islamize the West.

Willing to Islamize other countries is a Satanic concept when the countries of the Muslims are evidently the most anti-Islamic realms in the world, being infested with homosexual 'princes', criminal 'kings', corrupt 'emirs', felonious 'presidents', ignorant 'imams' and degraded, obscurantist, and uncivilized masses; the firm strategy of France, as a secular state, has to be the physical elimination of every Muslim who intends to Islamize the country, conquer the West, and does not accept the secular example and practices of Kemal Ataturk as the only form of Islam in the 20th and the 21st c.

It goes without saying that the French Constitution and the entirety of the existing legislation have to be immediately readjusted in order to allow for every step needed in this regard. All existing ghettoes on French territory must be declared "National Territory under Alien Occupation", militarily invaded, and all the alien elements mercilessly executed in public.

In alliance with other major forces, France has to take drastic measures for the abrupt overthrow of the current regimes of Turkey, Syria, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Qatar, Kuwait, UAE, Iran and other countries in order to overwhelmingly transform the region, uproot the puppets of MI6 and England, and remove the persistent threat of the pseudo-Islamic militants.

Nevertheless, after the elimination of this primary threat, the need for extra workers will certainly persist, and it has to be effectively and methodically addressed. That's why a totally different French government will have to strike few agreements with China, India, and other states, and acting on these bilateral deals, in most systematic manner, welcome in France as many millions of foreign workers as they are needed. Now, the modalities of the agreements will have to concern the details of residence, communication, work, and payment, as well as the duration of the contracts that the French companies or state or army will offer to all these distinct, known, and well identified persons, who will search to improve their standards of life by working in France.

5- No extremist and no moderate Islam!

An important ingredient of a) the perfidiously contrived, systematically diffused, and covertly imposed -by the English academic colonial establishment- falsification of the historical past, heritage and interconnection of numerous nations, b) the distortion of the world perception skills and abilities of diverse nomadic or sedentary societies, ethnic groups and religious communities across the Earth, and c) the methodic destruction of the relationship between the French (and the continental Europeans in general) and many nations in Asia and Africa was the academic, intellectual and political misrepresentation of Islam. This evil stratagem produced a double confusion, first among Muslims and second in the middle of non-Muslims.

The monstrously antihuman stratagem subtly utilized the spiritual, intellectual, academic, educational, economic and governmental decay of the Islamic world in order to generate a- among Muslims:

1- an intransigent anti-Western stance – instead of a self-criticism;

2- a superficial enmity toward colonials – in place of a resourceful rediscovery and efficient reassessment of their own grand past and exquisite heritage; and

3- an unnecessary (theological-ideological-political) radicalism based on total misunderstanding and absolute ignorance of their own majestic legacy – rather than in-depth comprehension and rejection of their own false ideas, mistakes and oversights (which were formed during and because of the 4-century long decadence).

b- among non-Muslims:

1- a heinous identification of Islam with the quasi-barbarian conditions of ignorance that characterized the average Muslims of the time of decadence (down to our days) and with the anti-Western hatred that was rightfully produced among the failing (Ottoman, Safavid-Afshar-Qajar, and Mughal) elites due to their own lack of self-criticism, rediscovery and recovery – instead of sincere, benevolent and trustworthy delving into disregarded and/or forgotten Islamic literature, wisdom, science and spirituality;

2- the calamitous repetition of clerical, medieval, anti-Islamic rhetoric of deliberate misinterpretation of Islam – in place of a perspicacious analysis of the Islamic sources and a compassionate stance toward the 18th, 19th and 20th c. Muslims, which would involve a determinant and resolute French / Western assistance (to the Muslims) in the rediscovery the Golden Era of Islamic civilization and the recovery of their own, Islamic, non-Western, identity, character and manner; and

3- the viciously false representation of Islam as the religion of Abu Bakr, Umar ibn al Khattab, Uthman ibn Afaan, Amr ibn-al Aas, and many other warriors, who were fake and false Muslims whose disastrous acts (could not lead but and actually) led to the establishment of the pseudo-Islamic Caliphate of the Umayyad dynasty – rather than the true religion of Ali, who was the designated heir, deputy, and successor of Prophet Muhammad, who did not take part in the heretic, pseudo-Islamic conquests (which were never demanded by either Allah or his last messenger), and who never launched any attack against, or invasion of, another land while he was the fourth caliph in Medina.

Though this malicious stratagem, Muslims were deliberately and heinously pushed toward darkness instead of being helped to come to the light of their own culture, religion and civilization, whereas non-Muslims were forced to accept the anti-Islamic venom of the Anglo-Saxon Evangelical lunatics or the pro-Zionist, pseudo-Christian extremists and to fight against fictional enemies, like Don Quixote, because today's Muslims simply do not represent the true, genuine Islam but its most decayed form.

Engulfing two (2) billion Muslims in fake intellectual, academic, educational and cultural dilemmas, abject poverty, and deceitful schemes of colonial dependence were the means through which England robbed the rest of the world, accumulated illegal and impermissible treasures, and kept bringing wars, mass killings, ruins and genocides to gullible, unsuspicious, and innocuous governments, peoples and countries.

In addition to the earlier mentioned divisive schemes, the vicious stratagem "radical vs. moderate Muslims" was launched during the last two decades of the 20th century in order to confuse the Islamic world and all the rest as regards the intentions, the purposes, the agendas, and the lifestyles of two groups, which -practically speaking- do not exist and never existed anytime anywhere, but unfortunately consist in lamentable automatons fabricated only for the scope of their total extermination.

For this purpose, English colonials (invariably originating from England, the US, Canada or Australia), working at the local level, fabricated various academic-intellectual, economic and political circles of indigenous elites that they arbitrarily labeled as "moderate" and "radical", presenting them to the rest of the world as supposedly true and genuine whereas they are not (and they have never been).

What is called "moderate Islam" is made out of various elites educated, formed and accomplished after various Western models (English, American, French, and Italian) in order to return to their respective countries, be hired in important positions either in the public or the private sector, promote the interests of the foreign country where they studied (except they were bought by a rival state), and create a fortune and a family to further prolong their own country's dependence on and docility to the colonial metropolis. In so doing, these Muslims, who may have even taken courses of Islamic theology in young age, are only nominally adepts of Islam, but essentially slaves of the colonial -mainly Anglo-Saxon- West. In fact, they are agnostics or atheists, being actually prone to political rationalism and utilitarianism to the extent that they can 'justify' the world's most appalling crimes and present then as 'correct', 'decent' and 'acceptable' according to the 'Islamic principles' of theirs. As they are entirely materialist, pathetically consumerist, and idiotically capitalist of character and mindset, these calamitous elites function only as an army of automatons-pawns of the Anglo-Saxon gangs that control the world, dragging the international community to a disastrous nuclear disaster.

What is called "radical Islam" is the army of successively radicalized ignorant and uneducated idiots, who were impregnated with the unadulterated stupidity that, "by reading the Quran and the Hadith, one knows Islam". So, you understand that, when 1400 years of History (of a great number of nations, cultures, and civilizations with widely diverse perceptions and interpretations of Islam, literatures, philosophies, sciences and schools of spirituality) are reduced to very few hundreds (or even fewer thousands) of pages, then the ensuing ignorance, the hatred for the true knowledge and the traditional wisdom, the mental rudeness, and the sentimental crudity lead to the most extreme ideological fanaticism (which has nothing to do with religion) and to the full utilization of those false believers by the worst enemies of Islam.

This second army of useless automatons, which think that they know everything (but know nothing) and believe that they gain the Paradise by killing humans is real dynamite in the hands of the English, American and Israeli secret services. Actually, the veracity of my present analysis is easily comprehended when one is able to notice that these lunatics never attempted to exterminate, as they should have done had they been true Muslims, all the devilish 'kings', 'presidents', 'emirs', rulers, generals, ministers, businessmen, academics, muftis, imams, and all the other local chieftains who consciously work for the lethally anti-Islamic interests of the Wall Street and the City of London.

Yet, both 'groups' have as common origin the same teaching, the same preaching, the same sermon, and the same -entirely false- interpretation of the Islamic history, culture, civilization, and religion, which is
- neither the traditional Ottoman, Safavid, Mughal, etc. doctrine;
- nor a readjustment of those doctrines and a reassessment of the understanding of Islam as a spiritual and historical phenomenon (ostensibly involving self-criticism); but
- a new, Western ideology-based, system of viewing Islamic theology (and, through this distortion, the Islamic religion) in a supposedly updated and politically asserted manner, which was intentionally, meticulously and imperceptibly prepared by 19th c. Western Orientalists in a way to permanently engulf all Muslim societies into a pernicious swamp of mental-intellectual-educational dependence on the West, and into an infernal internal conflict around a mistakenly perceived modernity and an erroneously viewed tradition.

For this reason it appears as bizarre to many people in the West how pro-Western elites and anti-Western militants in the Muslim countries can possibly coexist in the same countries, e.g. Algeria, Egypt, Jordan, Pakistan, etc. In fact, the so-called 'moderates' and the pseudo-Islamic 'radicals' constitute the two faces of the same coin as they emanate from the same -terribly wrong- reading of the Islamic heritage, and of the modernity.

Yet, the true, genuine needs of all the Muslims -and of all the adepts of other religions in these regions- have nothing to do with either superficial pro-Western choices or thoughtless anti-Western standpoints; in fact, de-Westernization and decolonization demand and impose resourcefully executed search for the local and regional Islamic intellectual-academic-educational-scientific identity and cultural-spiritual integrity. Today's Muslims not only failed to understand that this immense undertaking is their top priority but they also proved to be foolish enough to believe that they can survive without it.

But if we had hypothetically brought into this debate three 17th c. scholars from Ottoman, Safavid and Mughal backgrounds, they would have ominously rejected both, 'moderates' and 'radicals' muftis, sheikhs, ulemas and adepts.

I expanded particularly on this topic, because it is a very serious issue in itself. It is highly important even if we observe and examine it

- separately from the grave trouble that the arrival of numerous illegal migrants has caused to France and other Western European countries;
- apart from the preoccupying issue that the presence of Muslims on French territory has generated; and
- independently from the inevitable problem that the French colonization of many Muslim countries in the past has created.

The Anglo-Saxon plan providing for a frontal, terminal clash -between the Islamic world from one side and the Zionist state of Israel and its Western allies from the other side- must be outmaneuvered and cancelled not only for the military-industrial complex to sell fewer arms and weapons systems -and thus see their income greatly reduced- but also for all nations to live in peace and concord with one another, canceling once forever the eventuality of religious wars.

In this regard, France should situate its strategy with respect to the Islamic world within the approach initiated already before one century by Kemal Ataturk (notably the Nutuk, the famous, 36-hour long discourse pronounced from the 15th to the 20th of October 1927 in the Grand National Assembly of Turkey in Ankara). In addition, Paris should vigorously utilize at both, the national and the international levels, and effectively capitalize on the academic-theoretical reassessment of, interdisciplinary approach to, and groundbreaking conclusions about the historical sources of the Early Islamic History, namely a grand opus which was meticulously prepared and formulated by the numerous distinct scholars who contributed to the voluminous "Le Coran des historiens". In fact, this publication must serve as basis for the much needed, irrevocable refutation of the villainous and devilish fallacy that the pseudo-historian 'prof'. Samuel Huntington miserably invented as regards the otherwise nonexistent 'Clash of Civilizations'.

6- Sign a Peace Treaty with Germany

Rejecting the aforementioned schemes, France has to launch a new, great effort to reshape Europe and the world on a non-colonial, fraternal and egalitarian basis totally void of the slightest Anglo-Saxon trace, impregnation, distortion of truth, and/or bias. The focus of a new French foreign policy has to first shift to Germany. It was quite comfortable for many French presidents and governments of the Fourth and of the Fifth Republics not to sign a post-World War II Treaty with Germany; but it was calamitous for Paris, because it played into the same disastrous Anglo-Saxon plan to perpetuate a situation in which Germany acted as -practically speaking- a non-state. To properly understand the factual reality, one has to first view WW I, WW II, the Cold War, and the post-1991 ordeal (not as independent, sequential events but merely) as stages of the (launched in the 19th c. by colonial England) Great Game; this constitutes a catastrophic onslaught on the mainland of World History, i.e. Asia, threatening with extermination and extinction not only mankind but nature itself.

France has therefore to take into consideration the fact that, as regards its major eastern neighbor, Bonn, East Berlin, and Berlin have not been -under post-World War II circumstances- the capital cities of a sovereign nation, and that all the German politicians and statesmen after 1945 have been puppets of the 'allies' who declared war on Germany, a country that has uninterruptedly been in state of war with no less than 50 states since the theoretical 'end' of the theatrical act 'WW II'.

A tragi-comical condition of utterly melodramatic and emphatically pretentious, but unreservedly useless functionality concerns organizations, such as OSCE and the International Court in Den Haag, which generate unstoppably tons over tons of lies, ridiculous falsehood, and preposterous assumptions; all this execrably bureaucratic nonsense serves only one main purpose: to deceitfully camouflage the truth about the historical process of the Great Game, fraudulently disorient all the nations of the world, and treacherously make all major world powers waste their time until the final, nuclear destruction falls -in due course of time- on their heads without them expecting it.

Paris does not have the time and the luxury to continue its present policy, because the plan has it that France will be decomposed and ruined before Germany. The gradual decay and the evidently forthcoming decomposition of the Western world cannot be a matter of satisfaction in the hypothetical assumption that the country can be redressed alone. For France to be saved, Berlin has to be a fully self-determined, independent, and sovereign state free of foreign armies, NATO military bases, and treacherous or hostile elements, which -by impersonating the German politicians and statesmen, businessmen and academics- endlessly work to destroy the German nation.

To shape a totally new, groundbreaking strategy and drastic, fruitful action as regards Germany, an avant-garde, national salvation establishment in Paris must take into consideration only facts, namely:
1- Germany is nothing but a zone of occupation of the Allies or, if you prefer, a UK/US firm with the name Deutschland GmbH;
2- As no treaty or agreement has been signed since 1945, Germany is in state of war with the UK/US-led (and -deceived) 50 allied states; and above all
3- Long before France declared war on Germany on the 3rd September 1939, more than 6 years before the inhuman theatrical spectacle WW II was officially launched, another entity declared publicly war on Berlin in three distinct instances, namely
-on 1st February 1933: the heinous colonial gangster Henry Morgenthau;
-on 24th March 1933: 'Judea' {which has nothing to do with the then Jewry (or Jews) but describes a gang of financial fraudsters and colonial criminals, who -although impersonating- hate the Jews, and all the rest}, as solemnly stated in the English paper "Daily Express" ("Judea declares war on Germany"); and
-on 7th August 1933, the agent of the World Jewish Economic Federation Samuel Untermeyer, another representative of the anti-Jewish 'Judea'.

Totally disregarding and effectively breaking down the present lawless disorder, which is shamelessly presented as 'International Law' by the cruel gangsters who carry out the systematized destruction of mankind, France must act immediately like a lightning, surpassing Napoleon in his exploits, and thus conclusively help the German Nation, sending as many forces needed for the Germans to terminally overthrow the shameful, post-World War II regime of German subordination to the Anglo-Saxon inhuman paranoids.

After establishing a new free state in France and before screaming, as they will naturally have to "Vive le Québec libre!", French masses have to enter Germany in fraternity, cooperation, concord and determination to help their German brethren instantly put an end to any NATO, US, UK and other foreign presence on German soil. No Anglo-Saxon embassy or delegation must be left on German soil!

7- Identify France's major allies: Germany, Russia, Iran, India and China
Establishing a Franco-German tandem will help Paris re-integrate Europe into Asia. In this regard, it is essential to realize that the Anglo-Saxon fallacies of geopolitics and geostrategics have no scientific foundation and they were invented only to fool the victims who would pay attention to them. In spite of its great success overseas, which has to be maintained, France must fundamentally situate its strategy in the unity, indivisibility, and cohesiveness of the Afro-Asiatic landmass of which Europe is only one peninsula. France is by definition a continental empire, and this is how Napoleon envisioned the historical mission of the country. The reason for this is very simple: maritime empires never existed; when they appeared, they were doomed to disappear; and their rise, if lasting long, is predestined to inevitably bring the destruction of mankind.

Consequently, the sustainable well-being, the inalienable fraternity, the permanent integration, the solid continuity, and the effective synergy of all the true nations, the ethno-linguistic groups, the tribes, and the communities have to be the irremovable concern of France's world strategy. The truthful assessment of the geographical and historical reality is the only means for the major continental states to ensure concord and cooperation. Divisions among continental states that have been caused by alien islanders and heinous maritime powers must be rigorously solved or forcefully terminated; in fact, there cannot be enmity of a coastal state against continental neighbors. The evilness of the stratagem "my enemy's enemy is my friend" has to be once forever rejected, uprooted, and prohibited worldwide.

The alliance of France and Germany with Russia will be the foundation of the new, Continental Alliance and the Euro-Asiatic Union which will have to be established as a first step towards the foundation of a new, supreme international body, which will not only terminate the deliberate and vicious continuation of the Anglo-Saxon Great Game after 1945 under other masks ('Cold War' and 'New World Order') but also prompt a de-colonized and de-Westernized world community in which Justice will be combined with Knowledge, Truth will meet Temperance, and Fraternity will result in Concord.

The complete dissociation of every state from the local religious establishment, the termination of all religious, racial, ideological, and political sectarianisms, and the overwhelming rejection of the nonsensical pseudo-concept of multi-alignment will enable Paris, Berlin, Moscow, New Delhi and Beijing to launch the new international body, thus starting a new era totally void of previous developments, circumstances, fallacies, schemes, wars, disasters and ruins. The socioeconomic, governmental and organizational incorporation of the New World Contract will have to be extended to intellectual, cultural, academic, educational, scientific, and technological levels, thus putting a tombstone on useless rivalry and catastrophic antagonism in terms of energy, resources, finance, economy, arms race, and technological edge.

Conflicts or disputes, like those between Russia and Ukraine, India and Pakistan, China and Japan, Iran and Israel, etc. will have to be solved by excluding all external factors as resolutely and as consistently as it is needed. It has to be revealed and denounced that all these destructive events or counterproductive conditions were generated only due to the interference of peripheral forces, notably the UK and the USA. Their total exclusion from the Afro-Asiatic continent will be conditio sine qua non for the successful implementation of the New World Contract that will replace the worthless and nonsensical UN Charter. As a matter of fact, a new organization and a new founding document were already needed when the inhuman, evil alliance of the willing, namely the US-led coalition, invade Iraq. When an international body cannot protect its member-states, it ceases to exist; the sooner it disappears the better.

8- Set the Western Orientalism upright!
Vladimir Lenin said that "Marx stood Hegel's dialectic on its head"; now, the French scholarly elite will have to "stand Orientalism on its head". As a matter of fact, in spite of the pioneering, exploratory, and investigative work of the 18th and 19th c. French scholars, decipherers, and erudite academics, the Orientalist disciplines that offered access to original, contemporaneous, and authoritative sources, which documented the greatest moments of the Antiquity and the unequaled treasures of Human Spirituality and Intellect, have been gradually hijacked by the defective Anglo-Saxon academia, deliberately distorted, and preposterously adjusted to the Anglo-American colonial needs and hidden prerogatives.

Instead of perceiving the newly unearthed and deciphered documentation as common heritage of mankind and acting accordingly, the English Orientalists wanted to viciously readjust (or, if you prefer, rob) the material record, monstrously misinterpret it as per their racist, supremacist, colonialist ideas and bogus theories, and -even worse- keep the true, indigenous heirs of the ancient civilizations far away and with minimal -or no understanding at all- of the world-shattering implications of the discoveries as regards the imperative re-writing of World History.

What ensued was an enormous colonial monster or, if you prefer, a counterfeit Orientalism at the very antipodes of the leading early explorers, travelers, scholars, decipherers, and authors; this rigid, morbid and sinister system was directly opposed to their world conceptualization, their moral integrity, and their academic decency. Contrarily to their humanist aspirations to actively share their discoveries, newly acquired wisdom, and insightful comprehension of the past at the local, regional and international levels, the scientific disciplines, which were instituted following the digging, the decoding, and the access we gained to genuine texts written before 2700, 3400 or even 4500 years, were gradually handled and processed in a most anti-academic, conventional, and restrictive manner.

Worst of all, an increasingly conservative approach and a misplaced reaction to the flood of new, original material, which started being unearthed, led to racist concepts and absurdly anti-humanist theories; these pseudo-intellectual schemes that have nothing in common with the French Genius were invented in order to prevent the formulation of conclusions that would tremendously change the incomplete, partly and therefore erroneous idea we had (and unfortunately still have) about World History. The era of pioneering Orientalist scholarship lasted until the first decades of the 20th c.; Franz Cumont, with his leading-edge publications about Mithraism and the diffusion and prevalence of Oriental religions within the Roman Empire, was a perfect example.

Later,
-the lack of readiness to readjust earlier ignorance, irrelevant assumptions, improper world views, and untrustworthy narratives in the light of new, authentic textual documentation, which antedated the hitherto extant records by 2000 or 3000 years,

-the false approach to the conceptualization of World History,
-the absurd adoption of posterior values and principles as universally valid, and
-the paranoid motivation to view as the conjectural beginning of History a period of decay and corruption, which occurred ca. 3000 years after the real start of Human History,…
… led to a detrimental intoxication of the academic scholarship. That's why earlier correct conclusions started being progressively concealed, names of Orientalist series were changed, and the Orientalist disciplines were kept at the margin of scholarship, with minimal funding and even less interest for propagation-popularization of academic discoveries.

The factors of the Anglo-Saxon distortion of Orientalism struggled hard to minimize the impact that the bulk of the published Orientalist documentation would have on the basic, toxic doctrines of the European racism, colonialism, supremacism, and inhuman bias. In doing so, they found minimal resistance; Martin Bernal with his illustrious series on the Black Athena, Edward Said with his celebrated Orientalism, and several other scholars successfully refuted numerous aspects of the Anglo-Saxon counterfeit Orientalism. However, all these efforts were partly and uncoordinated; even worse, they concerned only few aspects of the immense and crucial problem, which affects all the sociopolitical and educational-academic establishments across the Earth and therefore impacts negatively on the multilateral perception of today's world.

In any case, it is not up to an individual, albeit the best Orientalist, to solve this vast problem, to refute the accumulated falsehood, and to overwhelmingly terminate the colonial Anglo-Saxon version of fallacious Humanities. It is ostensibly the task of an enormous college of Savants, who -acting similarly with those of Napoleon but this time cooperating with Russian, Chinese, Indian, German, and other colleagues- will put the much-deserved, irrevocable tombstone on the colonial and discriminatory version of Orientalism, which is still being taught as anti-scientific discipline and as inhuman Humanities across the Earth. It is essential at this point to underscore that the counterfeit, colonial Orientalism stands at the origin of every misunderstanding, confusion, miscommunication and conflict that may exist between the so-called Western World and the rest of the world. It also impacts very negatively on the relations among the adepts of various religions.

The Anglo-Saxon distortion of Orientalism was calamitous for the Jews. It helped confuse a great number of Mizrahi, Sephardi and Ashkenazi Jews about their own cultural identity, intellectual integrity, and historical consciousness; in fact, Jews have always been an indissoluble part of the Orient. But in Western Europe and North America, the rising Orientalist misinterpretation of the Orient turned the 18th and 19th c. Jews into culturally-intellectually altered citizens and subaltern beings, which were viewed as Oriental elements of the Occident. This situation opened the way for even worse, more deeply anti-Jewish approaches, theories and concepts, as per which the Jews would have to accept the most heretic and pseudo-religious form of Christianity, i.e. Protestantism and its onerous and venomous ramifications. This ferociously anti-Jewish movement of Christian Zionists originates from this sickness.

Even Jewish Orientalists ended up standing toward the ancient Oriental civilizations as opposite inspectors and foreign explorers, whereas the Ancient Hebrews -and consequently the Jews- originate from Mesopotamia, Egypt and Iran. As a matter of fact, the Talmud is an entirely Oriental intellectual-spiritual legacy, as it was written in Arsacid and Sassanid Iran. It cannot be 'combined' with the colonially-fabricated, modern Anglo-Saxon world. In this manner, today's Jews, either Zionist or not, were terribly deceived by Anglo-Saxon Orientalists like Bernard Lewis (himself a Jew), who failed to realize that (not only the state of Israel but) the entire Jewry would never be able to solve the problems that they created in the Orient by arriving there (between the 1880s and 1948 to say the least) as Westerners.

The Anglo-Saxon distortion of Orientalism was calamitous for the Christians. The calamities and the persecution of the Oriental Christians (Syriac Aramaeans, Copts, Armenians, etc.), either Monophysites (Miaphysites) or Nestorians, must be entirely imputed to the erroneous version of colonial, Anglo-Saxon Orientalism and all those fooled diplomats and statesmen of other Christian states who failed to keep all the Oriental Christian populations in the parts of the Ottoman Empire, Qajar Iran, and Egypt that were home to them. The viciously anti-Christian plan of the colonials was geared in order to trigger an unprecedented exodus of these populations, so that they arrive in the West and become the cannon fodder for the ferociously anti-Christian states and administrations that they would serve.

Instead of these series of genocides that the perfidy of London caused, France should have scrupulously defended the national emancipation, self-determination, and independence of an Aramaean state on the territory of today's Lebanon, Syria and Iraq with Syriac Aramaic as the sole national language and with various ethnic and religious minorities (Yazidis, Druzes, Alawites, Arabic-speaking Muslims, Shabak, Mandaeans, Kurmanjis, Soranis, Ahl-e Haq, etc.). Based on the fundamental principles of the French Enlightenment and Revolution, Paris should strongly contribute to the nation building effort by developing a National History of the Aramaeans.

The Anglo-Saxon distortion of Orientalism was calamitous for the Muslims too. All the calamities that have befallen on the Muslim world, and subsequently to other parts of the world, are exclusively due to the abnormal and malignant version of colonial Orientalism, which stands in total contrast to the ideals and the principles of the 18th c. French philosophers, and also to the illustrious Déclaration des Droits de l'Homme et du Citoyen de 1789. Imperceptibly deluded by their English colleagues, the French Orientalists failed to realize that, by tolerating, among ignorant Muslim theologians who traveled to the West in the late 19th and the early 20th c., false, corrupt, and even nonsensical versions of anti-Ottoman theological discourse based on total misperception of the Quran and the Hadith, instead of a resourceful sell-criticism, an in-depth reassessment of all the aspects of the Islamic civilization, and an innovative reinstatement of Islam's foremost values, concepts and principles, they only tolerated the formation and expansion of a multi-headed monster of pseudo-Islamic sectarianism, politicization of the religion, and totalitarian obscurantism far worse than the worst Muslim ruler.

The real task of every French Orientalist would have to be a- the re-familiarization of the Muslims with their multifaceted heritage, b- the re-discovery of their own past, notably the Golden Era of Islamic Civilization (that they had catastrophically for them and for all the rest forgotten), c- the Islamic emancipation and re-education of the Muslims, and d- the identification of the corresponding elements, matching points, and similar concepts between the Islamic Civilization and the French Enlightenment.

The -differently expressed (as attained within distinct social environments) but genuinely identical- principles of the two cultural-civilizational entities (namely the Islamic Civilization and the French Enlightenment in their original nature) would then bring these two worlds closer in every sense, because the ensuing interexchange would drastically impact on both of them in a most positive, creative and fruitful manner, preventing at the same time the derailment of the Western world toward the present degeneracy and the submergence of the Islamic world into abject ignorance, detrimental obscurantism, lack of education, loss of identity, externally imposed divisions, socioeconomic misery, disastrous dependence on its most ferocious enemies, and externally manipulated extremism.

With respect to the Islamic world, France -quite unfortunately- failed to understand that in reality Napoleon did not lose in Waterloo, but when the French Orientalists were gradually and imperceptibly dragged into the intentionally distorted Anglo-Saxon misinterpretation of the Islamic ebullience for life, wisdom and spirituality, which is at the origin of the Golden Era of the Islamic Civilization. That's why France was not able to prevent the pseudo-Christian and anti-Jewish, Satanic Evangelical scheme, which is the means by which the entire world is being subtly coerced into the maelstrom of destruction and extinction. As a matter of fact, the Anglo-Saxon colonial Orientalist trickery and the stage-management of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict are nothing more than the projection of their own execrable misery onto the Muslims, the ensuing radicalization of several Islamist groups, and the subsequently nefarious, but absolutely false, portrait of Islam that they fabricated.

It is necessary to underscore at this point that the Anglo-Saxon distortion of Orientalism was also calamitous for the Parsis, the Hindus, the Buddhists, the Confucians, the Taoists, and the indigenous African, Asiatic and other adepts of traditional systems of spirituality, cult and religion.

9- Eliminate Hellenism as a divisive trickery

If Classicism was a matter of normalcy for the 17th c. Western European intellectual life, one has to admit that -already at the beginning of the 20th c.- it consisted in an entirely obsolete theoretical and academic system, following a- the decipherment of the Egyptian hieroglyphics and the Iranian and Assyrian-Babylonian cuneiform scripts, b- the access we gained into millions of texts and documents of the original civilizations, which constitute the first 'golden generation of mankind', c- the discovery, study and comprehension of the fundamental texts of Ancient Sumerian, Assyrian-Babylonian, Egyptian, Hittite and Iranian Wisdom, and d- the publication of the most significant ancient records from Mesopotamia, Egypt, Anatolia, Canaan and Iran.

The detailed knowledge of the Oriental civilizations and our deep understanding of the everyday life, activities, potentialities, achievements and world conceptualization of highly civilized, wisely structured, intelligently constituted, and universally defined societies of Mesopotamia, Egypt, Anatolia, Canaan and Iran drastically change and irrevocably cancel the earlier, narrow, inadequate, and clearly deficient worldview that the Western Europeans had formed starting with the Renaissance, based on only Ancient Hebrew (Biblical),Ancient Greek and Latin sources.

Even more importantly, the new discoveries, which were of unprecedentedly enormous dimensions, constituted truly original and contemporaneous (with the events that they detailed) sources – in striking contrast to the History of Ancient Israel, the South Balkans (falsely named 'Greece'), and the Italian Peninsula, which was a completely modern, clumsy, and therefore unreliable reconstruction based on posterior and untrustworthy sources supposedly copied (but quite often distorted, readjusted or even invented) sources, i.e. medieval manuscripts.

Even worse, the unearthed and/or deciphered material totally annuls and fully ridicules the nonsensical stories of the so-called Ancient Greek authors – or those attributed to them by the medieval monks who 'copied' the manuscripts. The fraud is of disproportionate dimensions if we only take as example the absurd lies compiled by Diodorus Siculus (or his later copiers) with respect to the Behistun inscription that Ctesias had read with the help -and in company- of Persian courtiers and imperial administrators. Whereas the illustrious inscription, in three deciphered cuneiform scripts (Babylonian, Elamite and Achaemenid Iranian), details Darius' victory over his contenders, the fallacious Sicilian author (not a historian) has attributed it to the Assyrian Queen Shammuramat (Semiramis) -so to a totally different civilization, language and script (Assyrian)- who lived and reigned no less than 300 years before Darius!

By preserving and persisting on Hellenism, the colonial English fraudsters, either Hellenists or Orientalists, turned the lights of the French Enlightenment and the French Revolution into a darkness, which was able to distort and actually distorted the quintessence of the French Genius and the principles that led to the establishment of the First Republic during which there were no politics but governance, no parties but popular participation, no corruption but honesty, no lassitude but action, no swamp but firm land, fresh air, and humanely innovative spirit.

The Fallacy of Hellenism was absolutely necessary to the English colonials in order to a- maintain their impermissible, racist mentality, behavior, and mindset, b- enact their ominous and divisive schemes (of which I already spoke),
c- diffuse their sick supremacism and therefore contaminate others, notably the French, the Germans, the Russians, and the Italians, d- generate the conditions within which the fake, fabricated divide 'Judeo-Christian civilization vs. Islam' would be set, e- make their -fiercely opposite to one another, but very naïve- victims (the heretic Evangelicals, the pseudo-Christian Zionists, the Jewish Zionists from one side and the Muslims from the other side) blindly, ferociously and ominously believe in their own, eschatologically perceived, 'final' victory over the others (which is something that not one true and faithful adept of Judaism, Christianity and Islam would ever accept), and thus f- prompt the ensuing, cataclysmic nuclear disaster throughout the Afro-Asiatic continent.

To survive, France has to get disentangled from the clutches of the ominous ghost of Hellenism, fully reinstating Napoleon's vision of a universal empire in the light of the newly acquired Oriental wisdom and Orientalist contributions and according to the conditions and the requirements of the -apparently multipolar but not yet decolonized and de-Westernized- world of our times.

10- Eradicate the fallacy of Panarabism

Similarly with scholars from other academic fields of the Humanities and the respective areas (which were targeted with Western colonization), the French Orientalists have been imperceptibly deceived by the perfidious Anglo-Saxon colonials, who instead of objectively exploring, studying and describing the historical reality, pre-adjusted their approach to their interests and distorted or concealed the truth in order to trigger absurd discord and vicious conflicts at the local and regional levels, thus turning entire regions (South Asia, Western Asia, and Africa) and the diverse native populations into socially, educationally and intellectually disabled communities with enormous complexes of inferiority and mistreatment, which ended in fratricidal clash and unnecessary fracas.

The silly ideology and pathetic intoxication of Pan-Arabism was elaborated in the early 20th c. by ignorant, falsely and contortedly educated individuals, who pursued further 'education' in the colonial capitals where they were subtly driven to absurd deformation of historical understanding, calamitous delusion, and fake identity. But then, turning their dreadful historical hallucination into an absurd political ideology, they were able to destructively impact on their uneducated fellow countrymen, after their return back home; this is how few individuals brought the disaster that we have observed from Morocco to Yemen to Sudan over the past century.

Pan-Arabism consists in direct spiritual genocide as it totally destroys the genuine national identity of hundreds of millions and generates a distorted and inhuman being with no language, no historical continuity, no cultural integrity, and no true ethnic consciousness; in other words, Pan-Arabism is the factory that produces misfortunate humanoids ready for the butchery that the villainous and perfidious Anglo-Saxon colonials have prepared.

As a matter of fact, there are few Arabs and only in parts of the Arabian Peninsula; all those who are deliberately and erroneously called 'Arabs' are mentally defective, educationally incapacitated, academically disoriented, and socio-politically deceived masses of automatons that have no past, no proactive sensation of their historical heritage, no cultural proprioception, no vivacious awareness of their identity and of what it entails, no 'sentimento storico' (feeling of historicity), and a total, terminal inability to act -internationally and geopolitically- as the undisputable descendants of their true ancestors. They act as malfunctioning beings whose umbilical cord with their past has been detrimentally cut by a vicious and merciless enemy. Suffice it to compare them with Iran and the Iranian nation in order to understand the eroding and destructive force of Pan-Arabism.

Instead of Arabs, there are:
a- Berbers, Tuareg, and other Hamitic African nations in Algeria, Morocco, Mauritania, Mali, Niger, Chad and Libya;
b- Carthaginians amalgamated with Berbers in Tunisia;
c- Copts, Nubians (in the South), Berbers (in the Northwest), Beja (in the Southeast), and Bedouin Arabs (in the Sinai Peninsula) in Egypt;

d- Nubians and other Nilo-Saharan populations (in the North), Beja (in the East), Furis and other Nilo-Saharan populations (in the West), and Eastern Cushitic populations that are familiar to the Ethiopian Oromos (in the central part) of Sudan;
e- Aramaeans (either Syriac Aramaic-speaking or Arabic-speaking) in Syria, Iraq, Lebanon, SE Turkey, SW Iran, Kuwait, Qatar, UAE, Jordan, Palestine, Israel and NW Saudi Arabia (irrespective of religion: Christians, Muslims, Druzes, Mandaeans, etc.), in addition to the various ethnic-religious groups that are collectively but mistakenly called 'Kurds' (namely the Zaza and the Kurmanji in Turkey, the Kurmanji in Syria, the Bahdinani, Shabak, Yazidi, Sorani, Faili, Ahl-e Haq, etc. in Iraq, and the Mokri, Gorani, Ardalani, Pehlevani, etc. in Iran);
f- Yemenites and Omanis in Najran (which has been illegally occupied by Saudi Arabia), Yemen, Hadhramaut (which was forced to become a Yemenite province), Dhofar (which was constrained to remain in Oman) and Oman.

The only truly Arab populations are located in the deserts of Saudi Arabia, and this is so because over the ages countless Muslims traveled to the Hejaz and settled there and arranged mixed marriages, thus overwhelmingly changing the demographic balance. As regards the early Islamic times' Arabs who settled in various lands outside the Arabian Peninsula, these were so few -if compared with the local populations- that they truly vanished at the ethnic-genetic and the cultural levels.

All the populations, who happen to speak the diverse dialects of Modern Arabic in the aforementioned lands, are not Arabs but natives, who due to the Islamization, at a certain moment in the past, got linguistically Arabized, without however becoming Arabs either at the ethnic-genetic or at the cultural level. That's why all these states repeatedly undertook successive Arabization campaigns in order to eradicate local languages, vividly cherished cultures, and an instinctive repulsion toward any alien element of 'Arab'.

In fact, these shameless and tyrannical processes were undertaken by colonially subservient elements that obeyed the rules and the directives of their patrons. As far as France is concerned, the slow infiltration of the colonial Anglo-Saxon Orientalism started early (in the 18th c.) and that's why France appeared to be the paramount beacon of the genocidal Arabization project, whereas this was exactly the role that the English wanted the French play, and it ended in total failure everywhere. Had all these populations been 'Arab', they would not have needed the traumatic experience of the numerous Arabization campaigns, which blocked any chance for a proper nation-building process to be launched.

For France to comeback as a major worldwide power, only a fervent decolonization process can bring groundbreaking results, effectively liberating all these nations from the present entrapment into the colonial schemes and ingeniously positioning France as the central factor of worldwide decolonization.

11- Create a great number of major regional allies by rectifying the mistakes of French colonialism

Removing the aforementioned misperceptions, misrepresentations, oversights, and confused views of several topics, France will have to embark on a new effort of worldwide radiation by utilizing the bulk of the academic contributions of French scholars and explorers and by readjusting everything to the constituent elements of the French Enlightenment, Revolution, First Republic, and 'le Premier Empire'. It will surely not be a military exploit or a political ruse, but an overwhelming academic-intellectual-educational-scientific-cultural effort to remove the present degeneracy and replace it with human ingenuity; thus France will also put an end to the entire array of absurd concepts that were diffused over the past 125 years.

France has to create new, active and forceful groups of social, intellectual and academic pressure that will serve as vital tools and crucial instruments for Paris to lead the decolonization effort, which will open the path for France's exit from the EU and NATO and parallel adhesion to the BRICS and the SCO.

By coordinating, advancing and implementing the decolonization and de-Westernization agenda that so many peoples and countries in Asia, Africa, Europe and America yearn for, France will make the most far-fetched dreams of China, India, and Russia come true; but at the same Paris will achieve a- the dissolution of the UK - with the secession of Scotland, Northern Ireland, and the Wales, and the subsequent reunification of Ireland;
b- the dismantlement of Canada - with the annexation of the Québec libre;
c- the obliteration of Australia - with the gradual takeover by Indonesia and the ensuing transformation of the austral landmass into an additional province of Jakarta; and d- the annulment of the United States – with the secession of Texas and its merge with Mexico.

In France's grand demarche for de-Westernization and worldwide emancipation, Paris' major regional allies have to be:
i- in Africa: Algeria, Nigeria, Congo. Egypt, Sudan, Somalia, and Congo; ii- in Asia: China, India, Russia, Indonesia, Kazakhstan, Uzbekistan, Iran and Iraq;
iii- in America: Mexico, Brazil, Colombia, Peru;
iv- in Europe: Germany, Romania, Bulgaria, Macedonia and Albania;

It goes without saying that in its decolonization effort France will have to 1- totally disrespect the current lawless system of the so-called international law;
2- overwhelmingly disregard the present borders wherever the needs of the French de-Westernization and worldwide readjustment project impose a different action;
3- resolutely overlook the existence of states which did not have to exist in the first place, such as Abyssinia (Fake Ethiopia), Pakistan, Iraq, Syria, Lebanon, Morocco, Mali, Niger, etc.;
4- fervently support the demand for national liberation, self-determination, and independence of various nations, namely the Berbers, the Tuareg, the Beja, the Oromos, the Afars, the Baluch, etc. and proactively help them achieve their goals as soon as possible; and
5- systematically demolish and delete the previous, colonial Anglo-French consensus in Africa.

A completely new French establishment has to replace the current destructively deceived (by the Anglo-Saxon perfidy), entirely defeatist, and gravely anti-French regime, which is fully unrepresentative, utterly worthless, and ostensibly ailing. As soon as they come to power, they must have no dreams. There is no international law, and there has never been a shred of it. This ridiculous term is a pseudo-notion; its comical appendices and clownish paraphernalia consisted always in an Anglo-

Saxon trickery, a jargon, and a scarecrow useful only to deceive rivals, fool allies, and blackmail pawns.

There was no international law at the time of the Carnatic Wars.
There was no international law at the time of the American Revolution.
There was no international law at the time of the French Revolution.
There was no international law at the time of the campagne d'Égypte.
There was no international law at the time of the Franco-Prussian war.
And there is no international law now.

As a matter of fact, the History of Mankind is plainly summarized and irrevocably concluded in the following statement: any possible act is unquestionably permissible to anyone, to any country, to any people, and to any new establishment that wants to put a conclusive end to the Anglo-Saxon colonial pestilence; the sooner one realizes this, the better.

The root of all the problems of today's France is the absurd acceptance of a norm that was invented in order to destroy France and all the major continental peoples and states. Only people and establishments able to discern clearly and decide resolutely, irrespective of the cost and the damages, will be able to survive in the years ahead. Every day that allows the present illegal, unrepresentative, worthless and destructive regime to stay in place is a day closer to the terminal burial of France.

12- A secular international community is not a faithless world
For France to survive in the years to come, the French state must remain the product of so many intellectual, social, or military battles. If the principles, the ideals, and the practices that made of France the country we all know are forgotten or disregarded, the Hexagon will simply cease to exist. Conventionalism, conformity, conservatism and bigotry have no place in any French decision-making venue, and by definition they cannot be tolerated in any scene and at any level.

If France, the French people, and the Jacobins became a superb tool at the hands of Napoleon, this is due to the resolute anticlericalism that stimulated and invigorated the pioneers of the Enlightenment, who intended to remove the darkness of the Jesuits and the Vatican. The «fête de l'Être suprême» is the supreme stage of every secularism. This fact fully demonstrates the reality of all secular establishments; the concept of the laic state does not exclude but on the contrary it effectively includes the human perception of the Divine, the popular piety towards God, the communal devotion to the supreme divinity, as well as the public acceptance of the numinous dimension of all the members of the society. A secular or laic state is not the bastion of the atheists, nor the domain of the godless; simply, it is the realm in which no doctrinal, no theological and no religious differentiation can possibly play a role in the organization and the governance of the country.

With the «fête de l'Être suprême» at the epicenter of the spiritual, intellectual, social and governmental life, France was closer to the Caesaropapist model of empire, like the Eastern Roman Empire under Justinian I or the Abbasid Caliphate under Harun al Rashid than to the ominous and repugnant Papo-Caesarist example of Clovis I and Charlemagne. This may sound as a historical consideration, but it has a direct impact on our world: it consists in the only way to cancel the madness diffused worldwide through the preposterous and treacherous book of Prof. Huntington about the bogus Clash of Civilizations. A world for all is neither the place of intransigent theological dogmatism nor the venue for any sort of woke agenda and forms of sick sectarianism.